Popular Vote for President by States in 1884.

In preparing this table, the vote received by the highest Elector on each ticket is given. In Iowa, Michigan and Nebraska there was a "fusion" on Electors of Democrats and Greenbackers, and in Missouri and West Virginia a "fusion" on Electors of Republicans and Greenbackers. In each case the "fusion" vote is counted for Cleveland or Blaine, as the case may be, except in Michigan, where alone it has been possible to analyse the vote. In it Cleveland is given the vote of the distinctive Democratic Elector, and Butler that of the distinctive Greenback Elector with the addition of 763 "straight" Butler votes. In consequence of the uncertainties in the count resulting from the "fusions" formed, the plurality shown for Cleveland must be considered an approximation to the actual result.

How the President of United States is Chosen.

Technically speaking, the president is not elected by the people, and the people do not vote directly for any presidential candidate. They cast their ballots for electors and these electors choose a president and a vice-president. In each State the number of electors is equal to the number of senators and representatives which the State has in congress. Each party has an electoral ticket with the names of its electors printed on it. The electoral ticket which receives the greatest number of popular ballots in the State, would be chosen by the people, and the electors named on it, will be entitled to give their votes for the candidate whom they represent.

The electors who are chosen will meet in each State on the first Wednesday in December, and cast their votes for a president and vice-president. As a matter of law, they can then vote for whom they please. As a matter of usage and public trust, they are expected to vote for the candidate whom they are pledged to support.

Certificates of the votes cast by the electors in each State are then made out and sent to Washington. These certificates are opened in the presence of the senate and the house of representatives, and counted on the second Wednesday in February. The total number of electoral votes is 401. The candidate for president receiving the majority of these (that is, 201) will be declared president. If no person has such majority, then the election goes into the house of representatives, which is required to choose a president from the persons (not exceeding three) who have received the most electoral votes for president. In the house the vote is by States, each State having one vote.
